

crop will be. This will hold good to the end of time. Too much water has the same effect as too little. Nature has furnished three systems of applying water—a year will come that it rains too much and your crops are cut short; again your crops are cut short; then another comes when it just rains sufficient to make everything grow nicely, then seasons abundant crops you raise. Successful farming by irrigation is following closely to nature when she is in her best mood.

Get your land as level as you can then get the water on and off again as quickly as possible. If let stand or you run it two great a distance you will water-log your land which takes the plant life-giving qualities out of it. Just the same as with a log of wood that you let lay in the water for a time, you may make it perfectly dry and try to burn it but the life is out of it and it will lie dead in the fire.

Another mistake I see being made by some in the Valley is making your ditches too deep in the ground. The bottom of your ditch should be as near level with the land to be irrigated as possible. If the bottom of your ditch is one or two feet below the level of the land to be irrigated it will hold a lot of water you cannot draw off and you are subjecting your land to be submerged which is another way of taking the life largely out of your land. Do not attempt to run your water over 440 feet on any sort of a crop, better less than over. The Good Book tells us about certain things that will flourish like a tree planted by a river. I want to call your attention to the fact that it does not state "planted in a river."

When a see a crop covered a foot deep in water it is coming very close to being in a river and even if the water is flowing from a source where the water is sweet and pure it will destroy vegetation.

Keep Interested in Something.
Many old men break down and become childlike because they abandon business, and thus lose much of their everyday interest in the world around them. It is not uncommon for old people to take up courses of study and successfully pass through them. All such occupations serve to keep the interest alive in something besides mere selfishness, and do more toward warding off "the blues" than all the medicine in the drug stores.

Mr. Blank "Will Oblige."
At a court of justice in Australia much frequented by Chinese a newly appointed clerk was ordered by the judge to summon a witness to the stand. "Call for Ah Song," was the command. The clerk was puzzled for a moment. He glanced shyly at the judge, but found him quite grave. Then he turned to the spectators. "Gentlemen," he asked, "would any of you favor his lordship with a song?"—Shanghai Times.

Hot Water.
People do not realize the value of hot water. It will stave off an attack of indigestion or check a sudden severe pain if taken as soon as one feels the attack coming on. It will ward off a nervous headache or eye-strain, if the head or eyes are bathed in it and one is careful not to rush right out into the cold.

Needless Compass.
To avoid the trouble besetting compasses on steel ships, the metal of which deflects the needle, a German inventor has devised a needless one in the form of a gyroscope, the axis of which always adjusts itself parallel to the earth's axis.

Succinctly Put.
"He dances beautifully," said the summer girl, "but he hadn't been here a week before he was engaged to be married." "Ah!" replied Miss Cayenne, "he two-steps better than his side-steps."—Washington Star
